MINI GRANT

- In collaboration with University Neighborhood Partners, the purpose of the Westside Studio Fairpark mini grant is to encourage greater community engagement beyond the annual plant sale event (located at the Northwest Community Center & Constitution Park), by providing family fun and activities for everyone. The annual Fairpark 'Celebration of Spring & Plant Sale' is quite successful within its scope of plant purchasing and associated community comradery. However, there is currently a lack of fun for all ages. Offering inclusive activities (i.e. rock wall, plant-oriented scavenger hunt, etc.) provides increased opportunity for everyone, but also stimulates even greater community cohesion.

Press Release

Fairpark Celebration of Spring and Plant Sale

May 5th, 2018

Contacts: Tom King [earth4alllife@gmail.com] (801) 502-1991, Bryce Garner [brycewgarner@gmail.com], Josh Smith [jsfreebird67@gmail.com] (209) 200-0126] & Kevin Robertson [kevinrob4@gmail.com] (385) 312-4136

On May 5th, the neighborhood of Fairpark will be holding its annual Celebration of Spring and Plant Sale at Constitution Park located at 300 N 1300 W from 10 am until 2 pm. The event, which has become a west side staple, features the sale of vegetable and herb plants alongside workshops and community outreach. The types of plants sold will include: 20 varieties of tomato, 16 varieties of sweet and hot pepper, 3 kinds of eggplant, and 6 different herbs. This year, the community will also be providing free garden veggie seed packages (with 30 types of seeds) to plant at home, as well as “Snail Cage” workshop (offering an insider’s guide on how to prevent snails from eating small seedlings), and “Plant a Seed and Watch It Grow; children” activity (which includes free soil, seeds, pots and labels).

In an effort to help boost attendance and increase the profile of the event, students from Professor Garcia’s Westside Studio at the University of Utah’s City and Metropolitan Planning Department, will help advertise the event to Westside neighbors, to help foster an atmosphere of inclusion. Utilizing funding sources received from University Neighborhood Partners (UNP), the event will also include a natural climbing wall, suitable for most ages, as well as a nature-oriented scavenger hunt for children. According to UNP, each of these additional activities promote the organization's principle goal of “a community coming together.”

The event is being organized by Fairpark community council member Tom King. King has stressed the importance of ensuring the event promotes awareness of the environment and the impact it has on our lives. A “lot of families like mine have been planting vegetable gardens at home. Edible gardens are not only a great way of producing local food, while supporting healthier living, but also the advancing of regional sustainability. Gardening reconnects us with nature. I am a gardener, who loves sharing this wisdom with others.”

The plant sale itself is the central feature of the day and emblemizes the positive effects of ecological integration within the local built environment. Workshops and activities seek to educate attendees (in an active way) on the role plants contribute in helping our communities both built and natural thrive, while enjoying fresh air and lively engagement. Local organization booths will include:

Lead Safe Housing Program
Northwest Recreation Center

Mother's Milk Bank
Neighborworks Youth Program

Other organizations may join but have not yet been confirmed. Both the Rose Park and Poplar Grove neighborhoods will also be sponsoring booths at the event to promote involvement with their community councils. They will also be assisted by Westside Studio students, helping to stock and operate the booths. The inclusion of these booths is designed to promote integration of Westside neighborhoods, while providing opportunity for attendees to learn more about various events occurring within their communities.

University of Utah students, alongside UNP contributions, are seeking to not only promote environmental health, but also community well-being. Celebration of Spring events provide an opportunity for neighbors to gather together and build a sense of belonging and involvement within a social setting. By offering additional activities to the public the festival hopes to bring in a large, diverse array of people to enjoy a beautiful spring day with each other.

The event is free and open to the public.
